學術演講紀錄

2025.03.20由夏威夷大學馬諾亞分校人類學系副教授Alex Golub（龔雁達）帶來講題〈What Is "Real Life" and How Can You Get One? How Video Games and Competition Make Life Worth Living Even If They Are Not "Real"〉

2025.03.26由國立台灣大學音樂學研究所副教授DJ Hatfield 施永德帶來講題〈傾聽Patawsi：都會阿美族社群與墾居者都市規劃聽覺模式〉

Like most things that happen online, video games are often seen as a waste of time because they make you fat, lonely, and unambitious. In contrast, sports is highly valued because it makes you healthy, requires teamwork, and teaches you to be successful. In this talk, we examine the literature in psychology and anthropology to understand what kind of experiences people find meaningful. 'Real life' -- a life full of meaning, fulfillment, and comradeship with others -- does not have to be a life spend 'face to face'. It can happen online as well. Once we realize this, we can see that life online is not always bad, and life in the 'real world' is not always good. More important is the quality of experience you have, whether than experience happens online or off.
